J. Lockie Wilson, speaking at Stratford, expressed regret that the rural mail delivery had destroyed one of the best social features of county life, viz: "going for the mail."

Rev. J. D. Morrow suggests that during the cold weather workless men should be allowed to sleep in the churches. There is nothing new in this idea. Some men do it every Sunday regularly.

Near Kingston lives a farmer's wife whose portrait we should prize. The Standard says she refused to accept the highest figure obtainable for eggs, on the ground that she was well paid at a lower price.—Exchange.

The Panama canal is so nearly completed that a large ocean steamer could now pass through. Col. Goethals said he intends to send a Panama railroad steamer through the canal, probably in April.

The entries for the Central Ontario poultry and pigeon show to be held in Kingston on February 3rd, 4th and 5th are coming in very fast. At noon on Friday seven hundred entries had been received by the secretary.—Whig.

The friends of Miss Laura Crowe, of Ernestown, will be glad to hear that the operation which she underwent in Chicago for complete ankylosis of one knee, was quite successful. She has returned to her home, about which she is able to walk without crutches.

It is announced by the Canada Cement Company that, owing to the dullness of business, they have decided to close down for the balance of the year 1914, or until further notice, four of their plants. The plants affected are those at Marlbank, Ont., Lakefield, Ont., Shallow Lake, Ont., and Calgary, Alta.

Counterfeit half-dollar pieces are in circulation at different points in On- tario. The coins are fairly good imi- tations of the genuine but a close ob- server would soon detect something wrong. They have a smooth feeling similar to lead. The milling on the edge is not good, and the King's head is tilted back rather more than is the case on the genuine issue. They are dated 1912.

The Kingston Whig says: The Civic Finance committee has sold $21,100 of the city's five per cent. debentures at 90, which is considered a high figure at this time. There is still $51,000 more debentures to be sold, and Mayor Shaw expects that they will be sold at par. The mayor says he would like to divide the $51,000 into $1,000 lots and sell them to individual citizens, many of whom would no doubt like to get five per cent. on their money for a period of ten or twenty years. It would be better than putting the money in the bank at three per cent., his worship thinks.

WARRANTS ARE ISSUED

Four Union Life Officials Must Face Conspiracy Charges.

Harry Symons, K.C., Is Arrested and Admitted to Bail in $15,000, But H. Pollman Evans Has Left the Country and Dr. Millichamp Is Ill In a Sanitarium—F. G. Hughes of Galt Also Figures In Case.

TORONTO, Jan. 27.—Following a prolonged investigation into the affairs of the defunct Union Life Assurance Co., instituted some time ago by Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, at the request of the English shareholders, who had suffered heavy losses, the Provincial Attorney-General yesterday ordered the issuance of bench warrants for the arrest of four directors of the Union Life Assurance Co. and the National Agency Co., on separate charges of conspiring to defraud. Those included in the indictments were: Messrs. H. Pollman Evans, president of the defunct company; Dr. George E. Millichamp, vice-president and medical director; Harry Symons, K.C., of Toronto, and F. G. Hughes of Galt, managing directors.

No sooner had the warrants been issued than the city police, acting in conjunction with the county authorities, promptly started out in pursuit of those involved. The proceedings were carried out with such great secrecy that only a chosen few were permitted to participate in rounding up the quartette indicted; in fact, the whole proceedings were enshrouded with such mysterious movements that information respecting the operations of the police was withheld as far as possible.

Shortly before three o'clock yesterday Detective Montgomery walked into the office of Harry Symons, K.C., in the Crown Life Building, Queen and Victoria streets, and calling him aside, informed him that he had a warrant for his arrest. Mr. Symons was taken to police headquarters, where he had to stay several hours before bail was arranged for. Bonds for $15,000 were advanced and Symons was released.

While the local police were taking care of Symons the authorities were in communication with outside points in the hope of apprehending at least two others indicted by the grand jury in conjunction with Symons, all former directors of the defunct Union Life Assurance Co. At the home of Dr. Millichamp, whose name was frequently mentioned during the investigation held under the direction of Mr. George Kapelle, K.C., the official referee, it was learned by the authorities that he was at the Home-wood Sanitarium at Guelph, suffering from a nervous collapse.

It was stated at police headquarters last night that the authorities at Guelph had been instructed to place Dr. Millichamp under arrest, but if his physical condition did not permit his leaving the institution he was to be allowed to remain there until such time as his health improved.

The authorities at Galt notified the local police late last night that Hughes was not at home, and they had been unable to get any definite information as to his whereabouts. No effort was made to locate H. Pollman Evans, as it was learned that he had taken his departure for Europe about two weeks ago. It was stated

British Notables Attend Strathcona Funeral Service.

Westminster Abbey Is Scene of Impressive Ceremony When Catafalque Bearing Body of Canada's Late High Commissioner Is Brought Into Church—Royalty, and Ambassadors Represented.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—In Westminster Abbey a mighty congregation gathered yesterday before the catafalque of Donald Alexander Smith, first Baron Strathcona and Mount Royal—mighty, that is, touching the power and influence of the men who composed it.

The sovereign of the realm and Queen Mary, Alexandra, the Queen-Mother, and the royal Governor-General of Canada, were each represented. There attended in person the ambassadors of foreign powers, high commissioners and agents-general of the daughter states of the Empire, doctors from great seats of learning, leaders of philanthropy, money changers of Lombard street and Threadneedle street, and merchants whose names are known in the far corners of the earth.

The service was of simple yet marked dignity. Sir Frederick Bridge, who was at the organ, opened with music composed for the funeral of Queen Mary in 1694, followed by Chopin's Funeral March.

The congregation arose as the voice of the priest was heard at the great west door reciting the opening sentence of the burial hymn, "O God of Bethel, by Whose Hand," the hymn which Lord Strathcona recited a few hours before his spirit passed, was sung as the procession came along, headed by the golden cross of the abbey.

A black velvet pall, on which in letters of gold were the words "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," covered the coffin, which was also surmounted by several wreaths.

The 90th psalm was sung to Purcell's music, after which Dean Ryle, standing before the holy table, read Saint Paul's wonderful argument for immortality contained in the 15th chapter of Corinthians.

At the same hour memorial services were also held in Aberdeen University and the Home for Incurables at Streatham.

HE APPROVES OF TANGO.

Jewish Rabbi Says It Is Beautifully If Well Danced.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27. — Rabbi Jacob Nieto, addressing the congregation of Sherith Israel yesterday, warmly commended the tange and kindred dances.

"The old padres in the early days of the California missions were wise men," said the rabbi. "Every Sunday afternoon they let the people dance, and watched them while they did so. In the middle ages the Jewish rabbis had the young people dance every Sunday afternoon, in the presence of the parents, and all enjoyed it.

"What we need is more common sense and less theology. The tango, danced by cultured persons, is beautifully pleasing; by the awkward it appears vulgar. You can take a religious ceremony and make it a farce."

Carson Prepared To Co-operate.

LONDON, Jan. 27. — Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulsterites, in a speech at Lincoln last night, said that he was ready to join John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, in an attempt to extend real local government to Ireland, or to remove any abuses or injustices, social or religious.

Referring to Mr. Redmond's speech at Waterford on Sunday, he declared:
"If this is the last word from his side we are in a lamentable and critical state of affairs. I am a man of peace, but not of peace at any price."

In his speech Mr. Redmond said that if any change was made in the home rule bill it would be to buy the good will of the opponents of the bill, and he added that he saw no prospects of their good will being purchased at any price whatever.

MONTREAL, Jan. 27. — How Lord governors of the Royal Victoria College, was told by William Peterson,

FIRE CLAIMS FOUR.

Kerosene Accident Causes Death of Woman and Children.

MONTREAL, Jan. 27. — Mrs. Napoleon Rodin and three children were burned to death yesterday morning at Notre Dame des Rosaire, Quebec.

Mrs. Rodin was starting the fire with kerosene and the flames jumped to the clothes of her little girl, who was present. Mrs. Rodin tried to extinguish the flames and her own clothing caught fire. Two other little girls in the room, one of whom was the daughter of a neighbor, were panic-stricken and ignited their dresses by attempting to put the flames out.

Mrs. Rodin tried to get out of the house but was unable to open the door. In her terror she tried to open a window and the curtains caught fire.

In a few moments the house was a mass of flames, and though the husband tried to enter the burning building he was forced back by the smoke and fire. He desisted in his frenzied efforts only when badly burned.

OPERATION A FAILURE.

Pneumonia Ruined Effects of Radium Treatment for Cancer.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27. — After a successful race against death from Iowa, by his daughter, and while the rays from $11,000 worth of radium were working their mysterious way, Elhanan Zook, one of the superintendents of the Panama railroad, died in the Hahnemann Hospital at four o'clock yesterday morning, not from cancer which the radium was obliterating, but from operative pneumonia.

As it had been observed that the cancer in Mr. Zook's throat had progressed so far as to render a surgical operation useless, the surgeons, as a last resort, turned to the gift of mother earth, and last Wednesday inserted the $11,000 worth of radium crystals within the growth.

The crystals, which in the aggregate would not cover half the nail of a matured little finger, were encased in capsules of glass and lead, and inserted into the cancer by Dr. I. G.
Shallcross, Dr. Frank Benson and Dr.
Frederick Smith.

NO TARIFF RELIEF

Big Interests and Not the Farmers or Consumers Have Ear of Government.

Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, has declared in the House of Commons that in his opinion under-production is the main cause of the high cost of living in Canada. He stated that the remedy was to encourage production, and increase the rural population, and he gave his views as to the best methods by which this might be brought about. Speaking about the Agriculture Bill, brought down by Hon. Martin Burrell last session Mr. White said:

"I shall be very much surprised if that bill does not produce substantial results, just as soon as it is possible to get it into operation, taking agricultural instructions to the farmer, teaching him as to his soils, as to his grains, as to his breeds of cattle. A Government that does that is doing something to promote agriculture."

In other words the government's remedy for present under-production is to "educate the farmer."

Liberals, while admitting that under-production is one of the causes of high prices, do not stop there, but have sought a series of remedies, based upon known conditions. They believe that the first step to encourage production is to remove many of the handicaps under which the farmer at present labours, to provide steady markets for his produce, and to permit him to obtain the necessities of life at the lowest cost. The abolition of the duties on wheat, and the reduction on agricultural implements have been urged upon the Government, but without success.

"It is peculiar that our honorable friends who are so generous to agriculture, who expect such magnificent results from that generosity should have refused specifically, so far as the records to date show, every request that has been made by the authorized voice of agriculture in this country," said Hon. Frank Oliver speaking of the visit of the Farmers' delegation to the capital before session. That delegation had asked "that all food-stuffs ground of war clouds and lightning, and the storm ready to break at a moment's notice. "The emergency" was the reason he advanced for an immediate contribution of $35,000,000 to the Admiralty. He attempted to evade thereby any declaration as to what the Government's permanent naval policy would be, although at the same time the tenor of his whole speech indicated that the permanent policy would be along the lines of continued contribution.

This session "the emergency has been quietly dropped and now his talk is in a more pacific vein with reference to better international feelings, and an eloquent hope that Mr. Churchill's proposed naval holiday will eventuate. But at the same time Premier Borden declared in the Commons on Monday last that "In due course, the Government would again ask Parliament to grant the aid which we proposed last year under conditions of urgency and need." By "in due course" the Premier meant the time in the future when there would be a Conservative majority in the Senate.

There are two or three obvious conclusions. If "the emergency" has disappeared, as Mr. Borden practically admits, then his continued adherence to the policy of contribution means that that is to be the permanent policy of his Government in regard to naval matters. There is no escape from that conclusion, unless it be that he will ask the people of Canada to believe that European hostilities can be conveniently postponed so as members of the Canadian Senate and the appointment of Conservatives in their places until a Government majority is secured in the upper chamber. Then, of course, the emergency might be re-staged, and contribution again evoked as a temporary policy. But meanwhile, with the emergency dropped, Mr. Borden has no excuse for not frankly announcing his permanent policy as being one of contribution.

SENATE REFORM A SHAM.

GOVERNMENT BLANDLY ADMITS ONLY A "POLITICAL" REFORM IS DESIRED.

Three years ago, Senate Reform used to be a favorite topic of Conservative politicians. Mr. Borden promised it as one of the constructive planks of his Halifax platform. Mr. Lancaster brought up annually a resolution in Parliament advocating either abolition of the Senate or a change in its constitution "so as to make it more amendable to the popular mind. But that was three years ago, when the Conservatives were not in office, and when Conservative Members of Parliament were not looking for personal preferment by way of

PARAGRAPHS FROM PARLIAMENT.

Here are a few of the terse paragraphs from Conservative and Liberal speakers during the past week in Parliament. The contrast in viewpoint and in logic is illuminative:

Dr. Michael Clark, Liberal member for Red Deer: "The slogan 'leave well enough alone' now appears to be supplanted on the part of this Government by the slogan 'leave ill enough alone.'"

Dr. Michael Clark: "Have the farmers not a right to speak for their own industry? What is sacrosanct or holy about manufacturers, so called that they should receive very much attention from the Government and that no heed should be paid to the plea of the farmers who are engaged in the most important industry of all. I contend it is the right of the wheat growers to be the judges in this matter."

Mr. J. H. Burnham, Conservative member for Peterborough: "Canada is in danger of becoming very materialistic. From one end of this country to the other we hear talk about free food, about dear food, about the high cost of living, and about the tango. That is all that is going on in the country now."

Hon. W. T. White: "So far as I know, there is no public opinion in favor of a revision of tariff at this particular time. As I said in the beginning of my speech, we have gone through a very trying period; a long continued and severe depression. But the morning is now beginning to break; money is easier in the international centres, and that is the most hopeful sign today."

Hon. Frank Oliver: "May I say Mr. Speaker, that the attitude of the Government in the two previous sessions was that of the ostrich that runs around in a circle, but this session it is that of the ostrich, which, having found no results from the circling process, sticks its head in the sands, and thereby hopes to protect itself and to discharge its duties. May I be pardoned if I suggest that the position is not graceful; it is not creditable, and it is decidedly vulnerable."

BELLES OF THE ORIENT.

Beauty Baths and Cosmetics Are the Light of Their Lives.

If the woman of fashion of London, Paris or New York spent as much time over her toilet as her sister of the far east she would have very little left in which to attend to her social and domestic duties.

The oriental belle devotes most of her day to the preservation of her health and beauty. She uses many wonderful cosmetics for coloring her eyes and brows and for beautifying her skin. On arising her hair is dressed by her maid, who massages the scalp with oil made from aloe wood or coconut. The eastern woman will never interfere with the color of her hair, for the long silky blue black locks are considered her chief charm.

Next a very hot bath is prepared, and in this she remains for two or three hours. In place of soap numberless unguents are used, which render the skin as soft as velvet. These delicate perfumes are secret preparations of the bathing woman.

The hair of the oriental beauty is beautifully long and soft, and they have a way of arranging it which adds a distinct charm. The face is washed over with milk into which the juice of a lemon has been squeezed. Perfumes permeate the garments, but are seldom if ever used on a handkerchief.—De

JUST A BOY'S IDEA.

It Made the Invention of the Reaping Machine a Success.

In 1830 Obed Hussey of Ohio was inventing a reaping machine, the ever designed in this country. chief difficulty was the cutting device which was three large sickles set frame and revolved so as to cut the grain. It would not work satisfactorily.

A young son, watching the experiments, asked his father why he did use a lot of big scissors, with one blade fastened to one bar and the handle to a sliding bar, thus opening and closing them.

Hussey instantly adopted the substituting for scissors the two toothed blades which are in use today on harvesters, the action being quite similar to that of scissors.

From the boy's suggestion he effected in one week a machine on which he had vain exercised all his ingenuity for the preceding two years. The principle of that cutting device the principle of all of the great harvesting machines, and its benefit to the farming industry of the entire world has been unsurpassed by any other ment, but without success. "It is peculiar that our honorable friends who are so generous to agriculture, who expect such magnificent results from that generosity should have refused specifically, so far as the records to date show, every request that has been made by the authorized voice of agriculture in this country," said Hon. Frank Oliver speaking of the visit of the Farmers' delegation to the capital before session. That delegation had asked "that all food-stuffs be placed on the free list as we believe that the taxing of food is a crime against humanity."

It is to be noted that in this demand the farmers declared their willingness to lose the "protection," which their products now "enjoy." But Mr. White does not think that the farmers know what is best for their own business, and again he is ready to educate them. He and his government do not think that free wheat, for which the three western legislatures have voted, is to the best interests of the farmers.

"So far as I know," he declares, "There is no public opinion in favor of a revision of the tariff downward at this particular time."

Why did the Government turn a deaf ear to the voice of organized agriculture a year ago? Why were the Conservative members from Alberta dissuaded from making any demand for free wheat? Why did the announcement of the passing of the free wheat resolution in the Manitoba house cause the Government annoyance? Why in short does the Government refuse to believe that the representatives of the grain growers know best what is good for that great industry?

The answer may be given in the following editorial paragraph contained in this month's issue of Industrial Canada, the organ of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Referring to the demand for tariff relief for the consumers in Canada on fresh fish, the editorial says:

"The reason why we cannot remove our duties and let the New England fishermen send their fish into Canada free is that the National Policy established protection for all classes, farmers and fishermen, miners and manufacturers. If we take protection away from the fishermen how can we oppose any attempt to take it away from the manufacturer?"

Mr. White's adviser, Mr. R. W. Breadner, late tariff expert for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association has no doubt whispered in the ear of the Minister:

"If we take protection away from the farmer, how can we oppose any attempt to reduce protection on the things the farmer buys? And that will hurt our friends the Big Interests."

ANOTHER NAVAL ANOMALY. GOVERNMENT DROPS MASK FROM THE PERMANENT POLICY OF CONTRI- BUTION.

Political opportunism of the Premier and his colleagues on the Naval Question has again done violence to the intelligence of the Canadian people. On the opening of the last session of Parliament, Mr. Borden heralded the introduction of the Naval Bill with the dramatic staging of "The Emergency" with spectacular scenic background, but without success. Conservative politicians. Mr. Borden promised it as one of the constructive planks of his Halifax platform. Mr. Lancaster brought up annually a resolution in Parliament advocating either abolition of the Senate or a change in its constitution so as to make it more amendable to the popular mind. But that was three years ago, when the Conservatives were not in office, and when Conservative Members of Parliament were not looking for personal preferment by way of appointment in a in the Upper Chamber. Since the Borden Government came into power, there has not been a word about any change in the constitution of the Senate. Even Mr. Lancaster, with his eye on a seat in the Red Chamber for the member for Lincoln, has been eloquently silent. There have been many fulminations against the Liberal majority in the Senate, and these have constituted the chief argument and excuse put forward by Mr. Borden and Hon. W. T. White and other Conservative speakers this session for the paucity of any real legislative achievements by the present Government. But not a word as to any permanent policy for "reform of the Senate" other than by the process of substituting, in due course," as Mr. Borden said, Conservatives for Liberals. As Hon. W. T. White badly put it in the Commons on Tuesday last, "We shall simply have to wait the slow process of time and of mortality until the Senate of Canada is brought into accord with the popular will."

In view of self-confessed political opportunism of the Conservative cry for some real measure of Senate reform may be readily gauged.

"PELLETIERIZING" QUEBEC. POSTMASTER-GENERAL RIVALS HON. ROBERT ROGERS IN TWO RECENT QUEBEC DEALS.

"Bob-Rogering" and "Pelletier-ing" are becoming synonymous terms. The first term is associated with such gross public scandals as the Prince Albert homestead and the Gimli land deals—not to mention Macdonald or Chateaugay, etc. The latter term in the Province of Quebec is associated with the mail-bag locks transactions, the debauchery of dismissals and patronage, and a cynical political opportunism that rivals Mr. Rogers record. Mr. Pelletier, as the minister in charge of party politics in the Quebec district is responsible for two brazen pieces of graft at the expense of the public treasury which has recently been disclosed. A brief recital of the facts follows. No comment is needed.

A site for the new quarantine station at Levis was purchased by the Government last summer. On July 29th, last, W. R. Dohan, of Levis, sold this said property to the Government for $32,750. On July 25th, Dohan had purchased it from Dr. Dussault, of St. David, for $25,400, and accordingly realized a profit of $7,350 in four days.

A month previous Dussault bought it for $12,000 and cleaned up $13,200 for his thirty days ownership. Dussault has purchased the major portion of the property from Joseph Bateau for $7,000 and Bateau in turn made a profit of $4,350 within a year.

Another similar instance of enterprise in turning the public money over to favored partisans has also been brought to light. On April 2nd last the Harbour Commissioners bought a stone quarry at St. Nicholas, in Levis county, for $4,500 from Jules Giroux, a furniture dealer in St. Ronoult. Giroux had bought the property from Benjamin Demers, a farmer in St. Nicholas on March 20th for $2,000 and netted $2,000 profit in the three days. It added interest to the deal that the initial purchase from Demers was carried through by Edmund Gravel, son of Alfred Gravel, one of the Harbour Commissioners.

FIRST IROQUOIS TREATY.

It Was Made Between the Indians and English in 1664.

The first treaty between the English and the Iroquois was made on Sept. 24, 1664, and ushered in a friendship that continued for more than a century. The Iroquois had been alternately at war and peace for sixty years, and the English found their dusky allies valuable in the war with the French for North American supremacy.

The treaty with the Iroquois was one of the first official acts of the English governor, who earlier in the same month had taken over the Dutch possessions and changed the name of New Amsterdam to New York and that of Fort Orange to Albany. In 1693 and again three years later the French invaded the Iroquois country, and the redskins lost half of their warriors. In 1713 the French gave up all claim to the Iroquois, and peace reigned for a time, but in 1755 the warriors joined the English in the war for the conquest of Canada.

When the American Revolution broke out the Iroquois adhered to the crown. At the conclusion of the war most of the Iroquois took refuge in Canada.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Open to Conviction.

No rock was ever more firmly fixed than were Mrs. Manser's opinions, but she considered herself of an extremely pliable disposition, with a mind open to conviction on all sides.

"It's the strangest thing to me the way the rest of the family talk as if I were set in my views," she said one day to her nephew William's bride, with whom she had been laboring on the subject of calling cards for more than an hour. "It seems to me you're sort of taking the same tone," she continued, looking sharply at the young woman, "and I don't want you to. There isn't anybody in this world that's readier to be convinced she's in the wrong than I am by people who know more than I. All they've got before 'em ever is to prove to me that they do know more than I, and I tell you, my dear, there hasn't one of 'em ever been able to in this family!"—Youth's Companion.

MYSTERY OF SIGHT

Most Wonderful and Inexplicable of All Our Senses.

LIMITS OF THE HUMAN VISION.

There Are Colors All About Us That the Eye Cannot See, as We Cannot Distinguish Beyond the Extremes of the Spectrum Red and Violet.

No two persons see precisely alike any more than any two persons hear precisely the same. The differences in these perceptions are due to the wide disparities not only in the organs of vision and hearing, but also to the differences in mental makeup of the individuals.

There are more unsolved problems as to sight than any other sense. It is the most wonderful and at the same time the most inexplicable sense that we possess. Every school child is taught that we see because rays of light reach the retina of the eye after passing through the transparent cornea, that curved surface which is in direct contact with the external air, the aqueous or watery humor, and the crystalline and vitreous humors.

The eye is thus made up of three separate lenses, through which the light passes before reaching the retina. When observed from outside it is plain that all the images appear to be reversed in the eye. We see everything upside down, but in some way this reversal is corrected, so that things appear to us as they should, though this simple point has not yet been explained by the most advanced science.

But the eye sees not only images and light; it also distinguishes color. And here is one of the greatest problems with which the eye has to deal. The white light of a ray of sunshine is divided by a prism into all of the colors from red to violet, and it is one of the greatest triumphs of modern optics to have proved that what we call color is nothing but the speed with which some parts of the ray of sunshine strike upon the retina.

The eye can perceive waves striking it as low as red and as high as violet, but there are many rays both above and below the red and violet, the extremes of the spectrum, as they are called. The human eye cannot perceive these because the lengths of the waves or the frequency with which they strike upon the retina are too great or too small for the human organ. Yet they are most important, exercising a great influence upon human beings.

The ultra violet rays are known now by their chemical action and are termed chemical rays, while the infra red rays are heat rays and are known as such. So it is evident that there is much that the eye does not or cannot see, even with all the mechanical aids which have been provided in telescope, microscope, etc.

What really carries the message of vision to the brain center of vision, which is at the back of the head, is the optic nerve, and the fact that if you have a pain in the back of the head it is probably due to eye strain is admitted by all physicians. If you feel that strain and headache located at the

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my fingernails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. MARY EARLEWINE, R. F. D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. MARY EARLEWINE, R. F. D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. HETTIE GREENSTREET, Nebo, Illinois.

SINGULAR DREAMS.

"Poetic" Effusion That Drew Tears of Pathos From the Sleeper.

Lord Roberts records a remarkable dream. In October, 1853, his father, to whom he was acting as aid-de-camp at Peshawar, India, had issued invitations for a dance. Two days before it was to take place he was silent and despondent during breakfast and eventually told his son that he had had an unpleasant dream, which had visited him several times before and had always been followed by the death of a near relation. As the day wore on his depression grew, and he wanted to put off the dance. His son dissuaded him, but that night the dream returned, and the dance was then postponed. "The next morning the post brought news of the sudden death of the half sister at Lahore with whom I had stayed on my way to Peshawar."

Many people have dreamed poetry in their sleep. The London Chronicle tells of one man who awoke from a dream with the tears streaming down his face at the pathos of the following lines:

Walker with three eyes,
Walker with two,
Something to think of,
Something to do.

JUST A BOY'S IDEA.

made the Invention of the Reaping Machine a Success.

1830 Obed Hussey of Ohio was using a reaping machine, the first designed in this country. His difficulty was the cutting device, which was three large sickles set in a frame and revolved so as to cut into grain. It would not work satisfactorily.

His young son, watching the expert, asked his father why he did not use a lot of big scissors, with one handle fastened to one bar and the other to a sliding bar, thus opening and closing them.

Hussey instantly adopted the idea, substituting for scissors the two sawed blades which are in common today on harvesters, the cutting principle being quite similar to that of the reaper.

BEER IN ANCIENT ENGLAND.

When the Law Demanded "Drynke" For the King's Subjects.

Authorities in England formerly took pains that the Londoner should not miss his full share of ale. In the sixteenth century, for instance, the brewer who ceased to brew was faced with the loss of his business. Thus, if the mayor got wind of "any of the said brewers, of their frowarde and perverse myndes, shall at any time hereafter sodenly forbear and abstayne from brynyng, whereby the king's subjects should be destitute or unprovided of drynke," he knew exactly what to do. The city council was empowered to take over the business as a going concern and to take measures to see that it was kept going.

The cry then and for centuries after was all for beer. There is record of a petition of 1673, for instance, praying that tea, coffee and brandy be banned. The petitioners reasoned that the laborers needed "good strong beer and ale," which "refreshed their bodies and neither did them prejudice nor hindered their work."

Besides, it cost little and was the product of home grown grain, whereas the new fangled drink was expensive and imported from distant countries.

rs. in the boy's suggestion he periled in one week a machine on which in vain exercised all his industry for the preceding two years. principle of that cutting device is principle of all of the great harvest-machines, and its benefit to the ag industry of the entire world is unsurpassed by any other invention for use on the farm.—George Patton, in St. Nicholas.

LIGHT AND HEAT.

How They Reach Us From Out the Icy Coldness of Space.

In answer to the question, "It is thought that in space eternal cold and darkness prevail—what then is the explanation of the fact that both light and heat from the sun, some 90,000,000 miles away in cold space, reach the earth?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Heat and light as such do not reach the earth from our own and 100,000,000 more suns. Radiant energy is transmitted by undulations or waves in electrons, which energy is in the forms of waves of varying lengths and amplitudes. When some of these energy impulses impinge on matter able to receive and appropriate them heat and light result.

"Many molecules in many thousands of kinds of matter are able to translate energy waves into heat, while others are translated as light on the retina of the eye and in the brain. But no heat nor light develops until the waves strike forms of matter fitted to receive, appropriate and translate.

"Thus energy will pass through a 'burning glass' made of ice, converge to a focus and set light objects on fire."

SIEGES OF PERONNE.

They Won For the Town the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The town of Peronne, not far from Amiens, has had the distinction of being decorated with the Legion of Honor and can place the cross so much sought after by every Frenchman in its coat of arms and on its seal.

Peronne has two memorable sieges to its credit, the first in 1536 and the other during the Franco-Prussian war.

During the siege of 1536 Estournel, governor of the town, held out for more than a month against the Comte de Nassau, lieutenant of the Emperor Charles V. At the end of that time Nassau, who had failed in three assaults, gave up the siege.

The siege of Peronne during the war of "soixante-dix" was one of the bloodiest in history. The Prussians surrounded it on Nov. 30, 1870, and the town held out until Jan. 9, when with half the town in flames, no means of fighting the fire, not to mention the lack of food and drinking water, it capitulated.

The fire was so intense that the bells in the church towers were melted and the stacked silver pieces in the bank were turned into ingots. Six hundred and seventy houses were destroyed by fire and shells, while 3,000 soldiers and citizens were taken prisoners.

see, even with all the mechanical aids which have been provided in telescope, microscope, etc.

What really carries the message of vision to the brain center of vision, which is at the back of the head, is the optic nerve, and the fact that if you have a pain in the back of the head it is probably due to eye strain is admitted by all physicians. If you feel that strain and headache located at the occiput the first thing to do is to consult an oculist and get the glasses which will correct the error of vision.

Your eyes may be wrong in any number of ways. Either there may be a defect in some one of the lenses or the nerve may have become weakened or the muscles of accommodation by which the eye is focused may be wrong. The last is probably the commonest of troubles and may be easily corrected if promptly taken in hand by an expert.

Cross eyes are only defects of muscular control, and the latest researches point to the necessity for correcting this defect as promptly as possible. Many parents make the fatal mistake of not calling in the specialist even when they notice that an infant "crosses the eyes." But it is in the early stages that this trouble may be best corrected; otherwise the muscles become fixed in their error and the defect is permanent.

It is never too early to put glasses upon the child who requires them. It is often too late to save the child from permanent injury of the most beautiful, most expressive and most useful organ.—New York World.

Marks of Social Distinction.

"The Hugginses," said Sherlock Holmes, "are very popular with the wealthy classes."

"How do you know?" I queried, confident of a brilliant answer.

"Because there are so many grease spots on the pavement in front of their house."

"I don't see the point," said I.

"You auto," said Sherlock.—Newark News.

Walker with three eyes,
Walker with two,
Something to think of,

But the limit of absurdity in this curious art was achieved by the woman who composed a whole epic in her sleep. On awaking she found that she could remember only the concluding couplet:

Admiral Kinkums and his seven daughters
Hung in a bark suspended o'er the waters.

Pepys on May Dew.

In Pepys' time May dew—that is, dew gathered from the grass on a May morning, and especially on the morning of May day—was highly prized for bleaching linen and improving the complexion. Pepys wrote in 1667: "My wife away down with Jane and W. Hewer to Woolwich in order to lie there tonight and so to gather May dew tomorrow morning, which Mrs. Turner hath taught her is the only thing in the world to wash her face with, and I am contented with it." Two years later he made this entry in his diary: "Troubled, about 3 in the morning, with my wife's calling her maid up and, rising herself, to go with her coach abroad to gather May dew, which she did, and I troubled for it for fear of any hurt going abroad so betimes happening to her, but I to sleep again. She came home about 6."

What Ailed Him.

"They tell me you've lost your hired man."

"Yep, best farm hand I ever had."

"Sho! What wuz the matter?"

"Nothin'. John's a German, you know, and these here Germans hev what they call the wanderlust. It's somethin' thet keeps 'em movin' from one place to t'other and don't let 'em stay long anywheres."

"That's queer, ain't it? How long had John been with you?"

"Only eleven years." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DESERONTO ROAD.

(For Last Week.)

Plenty of snow and lots of cold weather, in fact the coldest that we have seen in years, this statement was made by an old gentleman, a good authority as a weather prophet, the thermometer indicating 30° below zero on Tuesday morning, 13th inst.

Mostly all farmers along the line have been getting their year supply of wood hauled out and are now ready for the circular saw, which usually does up the jobs in short meter.

Mrs. Wm. Brown has returned, some time ago from Uncle Sam's Dominions, where she was visiting her daughter for a few weeks.

The hay press owned by Allen Oliver jr., is still on the road and is at present located at Mr. Wm. Roache's back barn.

Quite a few of the old neighbors of Sandy Reed, who at one time worked the M. S. Madole farm, turned out and filled a car with hay, which was stored in Mr. Madole's barn since Mr. Reed left the place, he being unable to work it any longer on account of sickness.

The ice in the Napanee River is reported as being good now and teams are crossing over from Fredericksburg en route to Deseronto to market and other points north.

"ROD AND GUN" of Woodstock, Ont. has put out an exceptionally good issue for February 1914, both as regards the character of the reading matter and the quality and interest of illustrations. That well known writer and naturalist, Bonnycastle Dale, contributes an article entitled the Bearman, descriptive of a ranch where bears are successfully raised in captivity. A humorous strain runs through this story, a slight departure, but an entertaining one, from this writer's ordinary style. "Prints from Canadian Trails" is a continuation of the fine series that is being contributed to this magazine by H. Mortimer Batten; "The Dominion Parks" as seen by an American writer, is beautifully illustrated; Edward Breck writes under the heading "A Nova Scotia Discovery" of the excellent caviar that is to be obtained in that Province; A report is given of the recent annual meeting of the North America Forest, Fish and Game Protection by A. H. Smith; and every page of the issue is packed full of interest or information for the Canadian or American sportsman.

BANKER PONIES.

Half Wild Horses That Trap Fish and Then Eat Them.

Along Albemarle sound, on the North Carolina coast, there is mile after mile of low, sandy shore, where nothing grows except a coarse grass, a few salt water weeds and wild parsley. On these banks lives a strange breed of half wild horses, known as "banker ponies." These creatures are generally about twice the size of Shetland ponies.

Every year the herd owners drive the "bankers" into pens, brand the foals with the proper mark and catch some of the older animals to sell to the dealers. North Carolinians say that the beasts must be starved into eating grain, hay or grass, for they have always lived on the rank salt marsh grass of the marshes and on fish.

They catch the fish for themselves at low tide. With their hoofs they dig deep holes in the sand below high water mark. When the tide falls they greedily devour the fish that are stranded in these holes. Often they fight briskly over an especially tempting morsel.

In captivity these strange horses are intelligent, but seldom are even in temper. Once tamed, they make excellent draft animals, for they have a strength that is disproportionate to their size. Foals that are bred from bankers in captivity make valuable animals—strong, healthy, intelligent and far less vicious than their parents. —Youth's Companion.

QUEER TYPE OF INDIAN.

A Mexican Tribe With Fair Skins, Blue Eyes and Light Hair.

Does the word Indian convey to you the picture of a person with black hair, black eyes and dark skin? Then change your opinion at once.

In Mexico there are many Indians who possess none of the aforementioned characteristics that are so often associated with the Indian. The Mexican Indians that are not dark are called the Mayas. They have fair skins, blue eyes and light hair. The only Indian characteristics that they possess are their high cheek bones, their wide mouth, slanting forehead and straight, Indian-like hair and shape of nose.

The Mayas inhabit the Sierra Madre mountains in the lower part of Sonora. They differ in many ways from all other tribes of Indians. They are supposed to be the descendants of the crew and passengers of a Swedish vessel wrecked on the Mexican coast long before the birth of Columbus.

Although quite primitive, their morality is high. They cultivate some corn and garden truck in the valleys and are beginning to raise many times

MESSIAH'S KINGDOM SOON TO BLESS

Old Testament Prophecies Show That "the Time is at Hand."

God's Typical Kingdom—Overturned—606 B. C.—Great Line of World-Empires—"The Times of the Gentiles"—Israel's "Seven Times" of Chastisement—The Two Synchronous.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Atlantic City, N.J., Jan. 25.—Pastor Russell is here to-day. We report his sermon from the text: "Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same * * * I will overturn, overturn, it: * * * until He comes whose right it is; and I will give it unto Him."—Ezekiel 21:26, 27.

The Pastor pointed out that according to Scripture Messiah was to be of King David lineage. For several centuries the royal family of David's line had a precarious course. King Zedekiah, the last of the line, lost his crown in 606 B. C. He is the king referred to in our text. Since then there has been no king of David's lineage. Neither the Maccabees nor the Herods were Jews at all. The kingdom is still overturned, the foreordained time for its re-establishment not having come—though near.

"Times of the Gentiles."

Then the Pastor explained that although there were Gentile kingdoms long before Israel became a monarchy, yet God recognized none of them, but entered into covenant relationship with Israel only. After the verdict of our text was given against Israel, to hold good until Messiah's Reign, then Divine providence recognized one great line of world-empires. These were given leasehold privileges covering the period of Israel's overturning—until the time for Messiah's Kingdom.

The speaker then pointed out that Moses had prophesied Israel's chastisement, and in symbolic numbers foretold that it would last "seven times." The Gentile Times, or years, are likewise seven. Both periods begin to count at the same time, and will end simultaneously. When these end, Messiah's Kingdom will begin its Reign. Israel will be associated with Messiah's Empire as His earthly people—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets being made princes in all the earth, as promised in Psalm 45:16.

The Prophet Daniel's Foreview.

Next the Pastor declared that God through the Prophet Daniel gave us two pictures of the "seven times" of Gentile supremacy. One was a vision given King Nebuchadnezzar, who overthrew King Zedekiah. It gives the worldly view of Gentile governments. The whole period was represented by a glorious image, whose head was of gold, etc.

Given the pointer that Babylonia represented the head of gold, any school boy could show that Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome were the other Empires. The feet represented ha dairy farm growing corn, clover and alfalfa, and having good pasture, it should not be difficult to produce 2,000 pounds per acre and at the same time see the fertility of the soil. This should yield an income of over $100 per acre instead of the meagre average of five dollars per acre which was the yield per acre cultivated, in good pasture given officially as the return from five thousand in Ontario. The acres need not be more than the cows; are yours common acres, or dairy acres?

herd will average up better if the cows are weeded out. Do you know for certain which they are? Can you easily detect them if you look at the records on forms supplied free by the division, Ottawa. State in your letter if you want forms for free every day, or only on three days per month. Is there any good reason why your cows should not yield at least six thousands pounds per acre? #### Wasted Mustard.

It is stated that a member of a firm of famous mustard manufacturers once remarked that it was not the mustard used, but the quantity that is wasted, which makes their trade a successful business. Usually more of this condiment is mixed than will be wanted and, as it soon turns discolored, dries and loses its pungency, the mustard is thrown away. This waste may to a great extent be saved if care is taken to gauge more accurately than is common the quantity of mustard likely to be wanted for a meal. To prevent unsightly discoloration if kept longer, mix with milk. It is always disagreeable to see a mustard pot clogged round the mouth with stale mustard.

China's Stiff Problem.

China was confronted with a stiff problem at the introduction of the telegraph. It was hopeless to think of combining the western Morse dots and dashes in sufficient variety to express the 3,000 or 4,000 characters used by a fairly literate Chinese, not to speak of the entire 40,000 or so known to the highly educated men of that race. A phonetic system was barred by the fact that the same Chinese monosyllable means different things according to the context or intonation and also by the diversity of dialects.

A Dane, Prof. Schellerup, found the solution. The 7,000 characters most commonly used are given their equivalents in a code of numerals and these numerals are telegraphed. Thus, "cash" in the code is 6030.

The institution of its Parliament also brings embarrassment to China, there being so many dialects within the vast republic. Pidgin-English has long been the Esperanto of China. A traveler tells, for instance, how he heard a man from Canton and a native of Tientsin resort to it as the only possible medium for mutual understanding. But why not write the speeches instead of speaking them? Not only are the written characters the same throughout China, but they are almost identical in China, Japan and Korea, however widely the spoken words differ.

The Ugliest Beast.

Probably the ugliest beast in the world is a monkey, a gruesome looking animal called the bearded saki. This is so utterly grotesque a beast that it would scarcely be safe to let a child or nervous person see it. The ugliness is not of an amusing kind, but of an evil, sinister nature. The beast has a sort of beard and a countenance unlike anything else in shape and lines. The monkey itself is not particularly savage, but is so hideous that the natives of its country, South America, say that no beast of prey, however hungry, will tackle it. Even a hungry jaguar will starve in a cageful of sakis.—London Mail.

overthrowing King Zedekiah. It gives the worldly view of Gentile governments. The whole period was represented by a glorious image, whose head was of gold, etc.

Given the pointer that Babylonia represented the head of gold, any school boy could show that Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome were the other Empires. The feet represented Rome ecclesiastical, with her daughters dominating Europe to-day. Messiah's Kingdom is symbolized by the stone which struck the feet of the image and demolished it.

The other picture was a vision given the Prophet Daniel, in which these Gentile kingdoms were pictured as beastly. In contrast, Messiah's Kingdom was represented as human.

Where Are We Now?

The Pastor then showed that in Scripture a "time" is one year, and that a day is symbolic of a year, lunar time—360 days. Hence "seven times" equal 2,520 years. Deduct from that period the 605 years before A. D., and we have 1915 A. D. This indicates that in 1915 Messiah's invisible Kingdom will be in power, the Gentile lease will have expired and Israel's disfavor will have ended. The Prophet Daniel foretold a great Time of Trouble at that time. See Daniel 12:1.

The Scriptures teach that for centuries Satan, a spirit being, has exercised great power amongst men—an evil influence which God has permitted, with certain limitations. Satan's reign has been one of sin; Messiah's will be one of righteousness. Both Empires are spiritual, invisible to men; both operate through human agents.

The Pastor then set forth the Scriptural proofs that the Jewish "fathers" are to be "princes in all the earth." This implies their resurrection at no distant day. They will be raised perfect, examples of what mankind may attain. The prospect of this "better resurrection" stimulated them to such heroic lives of faith and obedience to God.

According to Scripture, said the Pastor, there will be no more war after the great trouble of 1915. The "princes of Israel" will have dictatorial powers backed by the spiritual Kingdom—just what the world needs.

The Law Covenant will be in power, but not as before. That will be the regime of the New Law Covenant, with Messiah as Mediator. Gradually the stony condition of heart common to humanity will give place to tender-heartedness—the true human nature as before Adam fell will prevail. All who refuse to make progress, after one hundred years' probation will be counted unworthy of future favors, and destroyed in the Second Death—utter destruction, annihilation.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, receipts of live stock for the week ended Jan. 24 were 1550 cattle, 550 sheep and lambs, 1650 hogs and 300 calves. The supply for sale today amounted to 1100 cattle, 450 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 150 calves.

The trade in cattle was very slow, owing to the fact that both packers and butchers generally bought pretty freely last week and they all have fair supplies on hand. Prices declined 25 cents per cwt., but even at this reduction the few buyers present showed little disposition to operate any way freely, and the trade on the whole was unsatisfactory. A few small lots of choice steers sold at $8 to $8.25 per cwt.

A feature of the trade in small meats is the weaker feeling in the market for lambs, prices having declined, owing to the liberal supplies coming forward at this season of the year.

CAPITALISTS AND PR

We are living in an age in which the control and the sale of public want in food, clothing, etc., and thereby the monopoly to raise prices to the suner. The people are ignorant of the ways and means by which this is sought to be accomplished. They know however that at least of high prices result from combines and trusts, from the ing of stocks, the granting of privileges etc., which increase the cost of a large range of articles common use from spoils of agricultural implements. The injurious effects of such are more patent to most of us.

There are, however, some more obscure plans of wealthy capitalists to duly increase their gain so clearly understood by the public which are contrary to the public interests. One of these is the plan of late years especially on the continent, of the great department stores in the large cities. To many a sight this may seem to be a thing as plausible reasons are how people may be better served by a number of separate and independent dealers.

But, things are not always as they seem especially where the capitalists are seeking for greater gain. As the combines, the expressed object of the plan is to lower prices by lessening the cost of production, but the real object is to obtain control of production and so raise prices to the consumer. The ultimate object of the capitalists own these great departmental stores is the same as the combines, to unduly increase their profits by their plan for doing this is quite different from that of the combines it is impossible for them to control production as the goods they sell are every description and are gathered from world wide sources. When high concerns first seek to obtain a wide reputation throughout the world for cheapness. Having capital at their command they can money freely in a variety of ways to accomplish their end.

It may scarcely be credited that usually hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent annually by some of the huge concerns in advertising a new line of various lines of well known goods at cost and often at less than cost. This is done of course to increase the sale of other goods on which they get larger profits than other goods would be obtained. A sample will illustrate this. Some of the stores in New York were in the dishonest use of newly published books. The book publishers lately applied to the courts of law to prevent getting their books unless they were sold to the publisher because they were injuring the trade by putting them in the market and selling them at cost. The publishers' business in the courts create an impression that the other goods lower than elsewhere. The law however did not interfere here. The publisher then refused to supply the books, but notwithstanding they continued to get them through parties. This unfair practise injured to other dealers and the authors and publishers as it diminished the sale of their books throughout the country, inasmuch as other merchants rather than be charged too much for the books ceased to keep them in stock. A thing similar to this was being over in Canada.

USE SHORT SENTENCES.

The Benefit of Brevity Very Pointedly Emphasized by a Writer.

Writers who wish to impart to their productions power and pungency, who wish to keep the reader's attention upon the tiptoe of activity, who desire to escape the imputation of pedantry and who seek to surcharge their sentiments with sparkle and spirit, will do well to bear in mind constantly that long, lingering sentences, unduly over-burdened with an abundance of phrases, clauses and parenthetical observations of a more or less digressive character, are apt to be tiresome to the reader, especially if the subject matter be at all profound or ponderous, to place an undue strain upon his powers of concentration and to leave him with a confused concept of the ideas which the writer apparently has been at great pains to concentrate, while short, snappy sentences, on the other hand, with the frequent recurrence of subject and predicate, thus recalling and emphasizing the idea to be expressed as the development of the thought proceeds, like numerous sign posts upon an untraveled road, these frequent breaks having the effect of taking a new hold upon the reader's attention, oases in the desert of words, as it were, will be found to be much more effective, much more conducive to clarity and far better calculated to preserve the contact, the wireless connection, so to speak, between the writer and the reader, provided, however, and it is always very easy to err through a too strict and too literal application of a general rule, the sentences are not so short as to give a jerky, choppy and sketchy effect and to scatter the reader's attention so often as to send him wool-gathering completely.

Improving the Backbone.

Although the following sounds like an Irish pun, it is credited to an American clergyman:

"Patriotism is the backbone of the United States," quoth the minister.

His congregation nodded a silent approval.

"And what we have to do is to train that backbone and bring it to the front."—Boston Herald.

Smart Dog.

"Which is the smarter, the dog or the horse?"

"No comparison. The dog is the wise one."

"How do you make that out?"

One of the big departmental there obtained a contract from Government to supply school to the public schools at a regular publishers could afford except at a serious loss to them. This was taking advantage of fording a grand opportunity to tise their business as the book supplied to every school in th vince at an unusually low price the name of the store plainly in on each book. Any loss sustai this transaction would be recou hundred fold by increased s other goods at larger profits otherwise obtainable. This is sample of what is being done day, numerous articles of cl dry goods, patent medicines e selected from time to time, n thing then another, and thous dollars worth of these are sold or sometimes even less and adv in their catalogues which a tributed broadcast all over the c to make believe that all goo offered at the same advant rates. There are many other elaborate plans of a like de character adopted with the sa in view, not to speak of triflin and inducements such as prepa of freight charges on parcels o sent to distant points by whic country people are tempted.

Cases have arisen in some States where important ind have been utterly ruined by proceedings of these big co. Not long ago a patent was secu a useful domestic article. Th priors built a factory at mu and on turning out the finished advertised it with the price at it was to be sold from the Atla the Pacific. It being a popul useful thing their travelling s took orders for it from mer throughout the country then s those large departmental s quantities of it put it in their logues for sale at what it cost. The immediate consequence that all other dealers at once so what they had of them in stoc would buy no more, thereupon big concerns, having served purpose with it as an adverti there being now no longer a co son to be made of their price other dealers also ceased to the result was that what had pr to be a flourishing trade was ri the factory closed up, and wo thrown out of employment.

These large departmental st large cities have unlimited ca their command and can well af continue to spend many thousa maintaining by such means a i tion for cheapness and so ir their sales and make larger pro other goods than by fair deali is well to bear in mind that in as wealthy capitalists can thus s in centralizing trade in the han few of themselves the public wi to pay for it. People may th rest assured that competition a large number of separate an pendent dealers is their best saf against excessive charges.

ONTARIO POLITICS

Both Brants are now in line with Liberal candidates for the next general election for the Provincial Legislature and if as good candidates are nominated throughout the whole Province the Liberal chances at the next contest will be bright indeed. It is expected that more nominations will follow in the near future.

North Brant Liberals on January 22nd in the most enthusiastic Convention ever held in the Constituency, nominated Scott Davidson of Paris for the Provincial House after four keenly contested ballots. John Harold was nominated for the Federal Parliament, but although an exceedingly popular man, he may not be able to accept the nomination owing to his business responsibilities.

Scott Davidson, the Provincial nominee, declared his unqualified support of the Abolish the Bar policy. He was one of those who took an active part in the recent Local Option campaign in Paris which was lost by the three-fifths requirement and which has stirred up discontent among the Conservative Temperance men of the town.

In both South Brant where John Hamm is the nominee and now in North Brant, confidence and enthusiasm among the Liberals are plainly apparent. The Temperance policy is securing the support not only of the Liberals but of the independent vote and a considerable section of the Conservative vote. In both Constituencies moreover, the women are showing lively interest and are preparing to work actively for the Abolish the Bar policy. At the Paris meeting they were present in large numbers.

Mr. Rowell, who attended the Convention, dealt with a number of issues including the agricultural situation, the factory act, Workmen's Compensation, Tax Reform and the Temperance question.

At present both Brants are held by Conservatives but serious predictions are being made with every sign of confidence that both these Ridings will turn over to the Liberal column.

SLIDES FOR LIFE.

Tibet's Perilous Bridges and the Way They Are Crossed.

In Tibet they have not yet progressed far beyond the primitive. Especially when it comes to engineering the Tibetans are at about the stage reached by Europeans six centuries ago. At that time in Switzerland they used a long cable and swinging carrier for the transport of heavy weights, even of cannon from one mountain to another a little lower down.

Now in Tibet they do not try to build bridges across the Mekong river, but where there are high cliffs a cable is stretched to the other side of the river, and for a trifling fee the person who wishes to cross clings to a thick bark carrier and slides down, holding up his feet at the point where the water means the perilous bridge.

If he wants to cross back he must go farther up or down the river to a point where another cable is stretched from high cliff to the other side, and again he performs the "slide for life."

This may not be a very comfortable way of crossing a river, but it is easier than swimming across, especially if there are rapids in the stream, and it is the favorite and cheap way of building bridges among the Tibetans.—New York World.

BOTH WERE STUBBORN.

ots of Good Will Power Was Wasted In Mere Obstinacy.

How much perfectly good, serviceable will power people waste in mere obstinacy! Martha Malone, after working three years for Mrs. Bixby, appeared one morning at Mrs. Wilson's back door and applied for a place.

"Why," said the surprised Mrs. Wilson, "I thought you were working for Mrs. Bixby!"

"I was, mum. But I've quit."

"Is that so?" Mrs. Wilson could not conceal her surprise. "I thought you liked her."

"Indeed I do, mum."

"And I'm sure she liked you."

"I believe she did, mum. Leastwise she always seemed to."

"Well"—Mrs. Wilson was still wondering what the trouble had been.

"Well," said Martha, seeing that some explanation was expected, "you see, it was like this, mum. I always put the blue china plates on the right hand side of the cupboard, and this morning the missus comes along and moves 'em and says, 'Martha, every mornin' for three years you've put the plates on the wrong side and I've had to come along and move them, and I can't stand it any longer.'"

"And," said Martha, "I says to her, 'Mrs. Bixby, every mornin' for three years I've put them plates in the right place and you've come and moved them, and then I had to come along and move them back, and I can't stand it any longer either.'"

"And so I quit."—Youth's Companion.

as it was original.

He had thousands of sheets of fly paper spread on the ground before the entrance to the hut. Then suddenly the barricades were lifted and the four lions came bounding out—into the fly paper. Of course it stuck to their paws, and of course when they tried to lick it off it stuck fast to their faces and heads. The lions promptly forgot all about human beings and in their wild endeavors to get rid of the fly paper rolled over and over on the ground, roaring and fighting for breath.

Then the headman and his followers rushed forward with long ropes, lassoed the plunging lions and tied them up—fly paper and all!—London Tit-Bits.

Successful Disappearance.

One of the most successful disappearances on record was of William Howe. Howe was a successful tradesman in Jermyn street, and one morning in 1706 he left his wife, telling her that he had business in the city. He never came back, and after some years an act of parliament was specially passed to enable Mrs. Howe to administer her husband's estate. Then one evening in 1723 the "widow" received a letter requesting an interview. Mrs. Howe duly kept the appointment—and discovered her husband. He had been living in disguise in the same neighborhood all the time, he explained, and keeping a close eye upon the movements of his wife. It is said that the reunited couple lived happily ever afterward.—London Standard.

You know what a ferocious, powerful beast the lion is. You can imagine what strong chains it would take to hold him fast. So can you even imagine a lion captured with fly paper? Well, not so very long ago four huge man eating lions were taken in that manner at the village of Gwallior, in India.

It happened that the headman of the village was able to shut the four lions up in a hut into which they had ventured in search of prey. He kept them thus barricaded for nearly two weeks, no one being willing to attempt to capture them. Finally he thought of a scheme that proved as successful

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

Being a True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampdon, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman, In the Great South Seas.

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Copyright, 1912, by Cyrus Townsend Brady

My hanger hung at the side of my berth. The door was a strong one. It was locked and barred without. I might have broken it down; I could have done so if I had had space enough in which to run and hurl myself against it. I might even have kicked it to pieces with my heavy seaman's boot. Certainly I could easily have blown the lock off with my pistol, but any of these endeavors would have roused the ship.

I had one other hope. If Captain Matthews should come to the cabin I would appeal to him. For the rest I determined not to sleep that night. Some strange foreboding possessed me.

We were near the latitude and longitude of the island we were seeking, if indeed there were such an island as was thought to be, and I reasoned that the men would argue now and it would be a good time for an outbreak, especially since I was removed. Would it come that night? Would it come at all? Was I mistaken in the men?

I have often wondered why women were made, and since they were made, why men should be such fools about them. Here I was helpless just because I had snatched a kiss from one. And now that I am in the mood for confession, I might as well say that I fully rejoiced in that kiss.

Well, whatever happened, I had the memory of that kiss. She would never forgive me. Of course there was absolutely no hope that she would return my suit, even in her poverty. She was not for such as I, and if there was anything in this old buccaneer's parchment, if there was an island and if she did get the treasure, why, the world would be at her feet again. And I, like the fool I was, was helping her to get it, to bring it about. I was mad,

"The first man," I hissed out, "gets a bullet."

she must have been in a sound sleep, indeed, for the door did not open. Evidently she had heard nothing. I waited. It was not an easy task, but I

"We will share and share alike in everything," answered Glibby. "Am I right, mates?"

"Right you are!" came from the deep voices of the men.

How I longed to clutch him by his throat and choke him! My temper rose again, but this time, as before, I managed to keep it down, but with immense difficulty, as you may suspect.

"Come into the cabin, Mister Hampdon," said Glibby, "and we will talk it over."

"Wait," said I. "Who is in command of you?"

"Why, Mister Pimball, the bo's'n," answered Glibby.

"Very good," said I. "I must talk with him about the future. Do you go on deck, Glibby, and send Pimball below, and be and I with the rest of you will soon settle this matter."

"All right," answered the boatswain's mate, turning to the companionway. "Pimball can talk; him and you can come to terms, I make no doubt."

Now I couldn't allow myself to hesitate for the thousandth part of a second. Ostentatiously I shoved one pistol into the belt that hung at my right side, the other I dropped carelessly into the pocket of my coat, and as Glibby clattered up the ladder, I walked fearlessly, to all appearances, out of the berth and into the cabin, the men giving back respectfully enough to leave me gangway.

"Now, what is it that you propose, Master Bo's'n?" I began, sitting down at the cabin table, while the rest ranged themselves about it, some standing, some sitting on the transoms at the sides, as Pimball came lumbering into the cabin.

"We know," began Pimball insolently, without further preliminaries, "that this ship's cruise is for treasure. We know all we'll get out of the cruise is what we signed for an' nothin' else. We've made a good guess that the treasure is hereabouts, and we mean to have more than our wages. We're goin' to have our share of whatever's found that we're after."

"So you shall," I said, "I am with you in that. I want something more than my wages too."

"What's this woman anyway?" broke out another. "Why should she get it all? She's a mere girl."

"You have said right, mate; who and why indeed?" I answered smoothly, marking him down for my vengeance when my turn came. "Now, what are your plans?"

"We want that there map or chart that you have been seen readin' in your cabin," said Pimball.

It was in a little bag around my neck. I reached down, pulled out the bag, took the torn parchment from it and threw it on the table. There was not the least use in my pretending ignorance or in refusing to give it up. They could kill me and take it any way.

"There," said I coolly, "you have it." Pimball picked it up.

"I can make but little out of it," he said, and I doubted if he could read.

"You can at least see the latitude and longitude on it in the upper corners, can't you?" I asked, hardly suppressing my contempt for the man.

"Aye, that's plain enough," he answered dubiously.

"And you see that little wavy line that runs up from the lagoon over the top of what looks like a wall to a for I had yet the hardest part bargain to drive.

"Well, it's got to be," said Pimball menacingly, starting toward me the marlinspike he carried.

"Now, my friend," said I, "we just as well understand each other. You can kill me if you want. I would be easy enough, but who have killed me you have killed last chance at the treasure. You know what latitude or longitude are in now. There is not one that knows enough to take a ship to sail the ship to the island. You are completely helpless. My life is the difference between treasure and treasure to you. You are smart enough to see that."

"He speaks right," said an old man at the back of the crowd.

"There speaks a man of sense, I. Therefore you will hear my words and accede to them."

"Heave ahead," said Pimball loudly enough, evidently not liking the situation, but failing utterly to see it could be amended since I could hold the whip hand of them all.

"What I stipulate is very simple. First of all, I am to have my full equal share of the treasure without rest. I am to be treated exactly the others in the division, and no liberty, which are just as valuable to me as to any of you, are to be dealt with respect, as I respect the others."

"Why, we told you that in this place," growled out the boatswain, "that's all you've got to say!"

"The woman!"

"Ah, the woman!" said Pimball slowly.

"What had you proposed to do with her?" I asked.

"Why—er—er—" the man faltered. He actually did not dare to say had been in his mind, and I doubt that my pistol never looked so threatening to him as it did when I quietly in hand on it.

It was probable that the other men as yet decided what was to be done with her, whatever Pimball may have concluded. I took advantage, therefore, of their hesitation and pushed matter to a speedy conclusion.

"Well," I said quickly, "I war for myself." Did I hear a groan from the cabin back of me? If I did, I did not afford to hesitate. I could not hear. "You saw how she treated me," I cried, raising my voice banging on the table. "She struck me. She had me imprisoned. I want to be given over to me alone."

"But"—began Pimball, not relishing the abandonment of this prize, "he had evidently marked for his own." "I tell you what it is, mates," said I, disregarding him and addressing the rest directly. "I am a poor man and treasure, or my share of it, means great deal to me, but revenge is solitely no hope that she would return my suit, even in her poverty. She was not for such as I, and if there was anything in this old buccaneer's parchment, if there was an island and if she did get the treasure, why, the world would be at her feet again. And I, like the fool I was, was helping her to get it, to bring it about. I was mad, aye, mad, with impotent helplessness that night.

I sat there in the dark, no light being vouchsafed to me, and the lights in the outer cabin not having been lighted for a long time. The wind rose and rose. The ship was pitching madly. My room was on the starboard side of the cabin, and presently I heard all hands called to reef the topsails. Captain Matthews was alert and ready, of course. Presently he put the ship about, and with the canvas off of her she was staidier. There did not seem to be any especial danger in the weather, and for that I was thankful.

I must have dozed. I was awakened by the last echoing of the bell forward. I didn't know what time it was, because I didn't know whether I had heard it begin to strike, but I could count three couples, which meant that it was 11 o'clock at least. I didn't know, of course, that it was eight bells, midnight, until the voice of the boatswain came to me through the bulkhead that separated the cabin from the quarterdeck.

"A-a—all the port watch!" I could hear the men below grumbling and cursing as they turned out. They had evidently been sent below to the hammocks after the topsails had been reefed for a couple of hours in. I could hear scraps of conversation.

"Now!"
"Kill him!"
"This is the best time!"
"The old man's alone!"

What I heard filled me with dismay. I picked up the pistol and pointed it at the lock in the door. I had made up my mind, come what might, to blow off the lock and get free. Before I could press the trigger I heard a call on the deck above me, a shot, a rush of feet, a scuffle, a groan, a fall!

CHAPTER VII.

Wherein I Bargain For a Woman.

WHAT had happened I could well guess. Captain Matthews had been attacked. He had promptly shot one of the mutineers, and thereafter the rest had got him. My first impulse was to blow open the lock of the door and rush to his rescue, but wiser counsel prevailed, and I did nothing. I am, I think, somewhat cool headed in a crisis, and surely this was one. I could wait. A loaded pistol was better than an empty one, and to deal with me they would have to come to me for whatever purpose they might entertain, either to murder me or to release me. In either event I could do more than if I rushed into the fray now. I could not help Captain Matthews. I was sure that whatever fell purpose they might entertain for my little mistress would be in abeyance until they had settled with me.

I listened with every nerve strained to the utmost. I also waited most anxiously for the opening of the after cabin door, which was her own, but she must have been in a sound sleep, indeed, for the door did not open. Evidently she had heard nothing. I waited. It was not an easy task, but I judged it best.

Fortunately I had not long to wait, for in less time by far than I have taken to tell it the hatch was opened and the heavy booted men clattered down the companionway. The key was in the lock outside, and I could hear them turn it. I loosened my sword, which I had slung by its belt around my waist, picked up the two pistols, sent my back up against the side of the ship and made ready for whatever came.

The door was pushed open abruptly, and I saw the cabin was crowded with men. At least half the crew were gathered there, and it was a little cabin, the Rose of Deron being but a small ship. The rest, I guessed, were on watch. I could not see the boatswain. Evidently he had the deck. The vessel couldn't be left unwatched on such a night as this and in such a sea, and he was the fittest man to take charge of her. The steward had lighted the cabin lights, several of the men carried lanterns which they had brought from the forepeak, and others had drawn their sheath knives. There was plenty of illumination to show their villainous faces.

They were surprised to find me so prepared, and I gave them no time to recover.

"The first man," I hissed out, "that steps across that threshold without permission gets a bullet through him!"

"We mean you no harm, sir," spoke out one who seemed to be a ringleader, a man rated as boatswain's mate, whose name was Glibby.

"What are you doing here?" I asked, "in the cabin at this time of night?"

"Softly, softly, sir," replied Glibby; "we are here to ask questions, not to answer 'em."

"What do you mean?" I cried.

"We are masters of the ship."

"Captain Matthews?"

"He will captain no more ships on this or any other seas," answered Glibby, with truculent emphasis.

Now, it rose in my mind to shoot him then and there, murderous brute that he was. If I had been alone perhaps I would have done it without reckoning the consequences to myself, but I had another to think of. Unless craft stood me in good stead her case was hopeless. And bad as Glibby was, Pimball was the chief villain.

"Serves him right!" I broke out with well simulated heat. "He disrates me and locks me up here just for stealing a kiss from a maid, and"—

"Spoken like a man of spirit, Mister Hampdon!" cried Glibby. "What did I tell ye, mates; he's with us!"

"With you!" said I, loosening my hold on the pistol, but taking good care to keep ready. "I am with you, all right. What do you propose? I am sick of the treatment I received, and"—

"We want that treasure for ourselves."

"And you shall have it, provided I get my share with the other men," I answered, scarcely startled by their words, for this I had expected.

said, and I doubted if he could read.

"You can at least see the latitude and longitude on it in the upper corners, can't you?" I asked, hardly suppressing my contempt for the man.

"Aye, that's plain enough," he answered dubiously.

"And you see that little wavy line that runs up from the lagoon over the top of what looks like a wall to an opening in the side?" I continued, determining suddenly to inflame their minds with the treasure so that they would give less heed to other things more important to me.

"Yes, I can make that out too."

"You see that little cross there?"

Pimball turned around and faced the others crowding about him in great and growing excitement.

"Here—lights here!" he growled.

The men nearest him shoved forward with their lanterns illuminating the torn sheepskin.

"Aye, I can make that out too. What does it mean?" he asked, after a long stare.

"It means, if there is any truth about it, that the treasure is thereabouts."

"What treasure is it?"

"The plunder of a Spanish galleon by a pirate ship."

"And how came it to be there on that island?"

"It was buried in that cave there a hundred and fifty years ago by one Philip Wilberforce, an English buccaneer."

"And how came this girl by news of it?"

How much of the story they understood I could not tell. Probably but little, yet the idea of the treasure was real enough undoubtedly.

"And you think there is treasure there?" asked Pimball.

Now, of late I had changed my mind, why, I know not, but I had, yet it would not do to tell them that.

"I am sure of it," I cried, "gold, silver, jewels, God knows what. Everything to make us rich forever."

"And what do you reckon the value of it all to be?"

"Oh, several millions of pounds," I answered lightly as if the treasure was so great that a million more or less was of no moment.

"Hurrah!" cried out one old seaman, and the cabin on the instant was filled with wild cries, bestial, brutal shouts.

As the sound partially died away I heard the door back of me open. Now, I had purposely so placed myself as to be between the crowd and the door. The door was opened but a little way. I was conscious that she was awake and at least was listening.

"You are the only navigator among us, Mister Hampdon," began Pimball, after the men got measurably quiet again, "and if you are with us, you will take the ship there to that island. We'll git the treasure aboard, sail away and sink her on the South America coast and then every man for himself with all he can carry."

"Am I to be captain?" I asked.

"There'll be no captain. Every man for himself, I say, but me and the boy's'n's mate, Glibby, will take the watches in turn. You'll navigate the ship and whatever is necessary for our safety we'll do at your order. Is it understood?"

"Yes," said I, "under one condition."

"We make no conditions," said Pimball darkly, "we are masters of the ship, remember, and this is our last word."

"It is not mine," said I composedly,

"You take the woman, we take treasure."

much more. You give the woman and I will divide my share of treasure among the crew."

"Well," began Pimball under but the sentiment of the crew palpably against him.

"Don't be a fool, man," cried the who had spoken before. "Give h wench."

"Aye, let him have her," cried on.

"He'll bring her to her knees, a third."

"Stop it," I cried, doubling my this was no assumed rage either my blood was boiling. "This own affair."

The men fell back. They forsook the moment their advantage in bers.

"Well, that is agreed at last, Pimball, reluctantly enough. "Ye the woman, we take the treasure "Agreed," said I.

"Is that right, mates?" he asked the rest.

"Right-o," was the answer.

"It's all settled, then," said I no—

"Bring out the gal, then, and see her," suddenly began one men, stepping forward.

The door back of me was open wide and she stepped out into cabin. How I thrilled to see her fearless, more beautiful than even men recoiled, and I stepped back self.

"I have heard all," she cried, murderous villains, to have kill captain and seized my ship, and you"—she turned to me, "to have gained for me and to have bought like an animal, a horse, a dog—had a weapon!"

"I'll bring her to her knees," said the man. "Up it," I cried, doubling my fist. "There was no assumed rage either, for the blood was boiling. 'This is my affair.'"

The men fell back. They forgot for the moment their advantage in numbers. "That is agreed at last," said I, reluctantly enough. "You take the woman, we take the treasure." "Agreed," said I. "That right, mates?" he asked of the others.

The door back of me was thrown wide and she stepped out into the light. How I thrilled to see her, erect, calm, more beautiful than ever. The men recoiled, and I stepped back myself.

"Have heard all," she cried. "You villainous villains, to have killed my ship and seized my ship, and you—she turned to me, 'to have barred for me and to have bought me an animal, a horse, a dog—oh, if I had a weapon!'"

CHAPTER VIII.

re in I Make All Clear to My Little Mistress.

My pistol was still in my hand, and she made a clutch at it, but I was too quick for her. I caught her by the wrist. She had cast upon us by her entrance, her beautiful presence, her proud, brave demeanor, was won by that touch. The men laugh. The remembrance of that laugh as my blood boil even now.

"I was not in earnest," I cried, but she interrupted me in a perfect tempest of outraged feeling.

"My God!" she burst out. "Why didn't you stay away a little longer? You dog! You vile, low!"

But at that I found voice again, for I was getting angry myself, my temper naturally being none the sweetest, save ordinarily when she was concerned.

"Hear me," I interrupted in turn. "Not a word."

"But indeed you must," I persisted, stepping within her cabin and carefully closing the door after me. "It is your welfare alone that I seek. I think you should have known that."

"After the insult on the quarterdeck last evening?" she asked cuttingly.

"Madam," said I, controlling myself again, but with added difficulty, "our concern is not with kisses, but with—"

"What?" "Life and—"

I hesitated.

"What else? Speak on!" "Your honor," I said slowly, whereat she stared at my face, doubtless stern enough in all conscience.

What I had to say concerned us both so deeply that I cared not what she said, and perhaps that closed cabin into which I had penetrated was the likeliest place for privacy in the whole ship. I could by no means be overheard, so I determined to speak freely in a way not to be misunderstood.

"I mean you no harm. Can you not see it?" I burst out. "It was all a play."

"A play!" she panted. "The murder of the captain, the mutiny of the men, the seizure of the ship, the giving up the chart, your purchase"—she drew herself up—God, she was a brave little thing—"of me," she continued, "with your share of the treasure—was that a play?"

"Part of it, madam," said I, stung by her scorn and stunned again by the thought that she could ever have believed me capable of such baseness, who had loved her, worshiped her and—but for that fleeting moment when I had kissed her—had ever treated her with such humble consideration. "I bought not you."

"What then?"

"The right to live and serve you; the right for you to live unharmed and"—

"And what?"

"And be served by me with no thought but for your safety and happiness."

She stared at me in deep consternation, her brow furrowed. I had wit enough to be silent and let the speech work.

"Have I wronged you?" she asked falteringly at last.

"What would your fate be if you were left to that murderous rabble on the deck yonder?"

She shuddered as I pressed the thought home to her.

"You should have known me better," I continued reproachfully, "than to have suspected"—

"But your insult to me this very night on the quarterdeck?"

"Is a man to be condemned beyond pardon who has served you truly because he snatches a kiss in a moment of madness and forgets it when your life and honor tremble in the balance?"

It's more satisfactory to come and see what you are getting. We have a large stock on hand. Correspondence solicited.

HE ASKED FOR A COT.

And He Got a Cot, or What They Call a Cot, in Scotland.

A resident of Terre Haute was traveling in Scotland and met a congenial acquaintance on the train. The new found friend insisted that he be permitted to show the Indian the best hotel in the small place where they were both stopping. When they got to the hotel it was full. As the Indian man was only going to stay one night, he said he was not particular, but would sleep any place.

It was finally agreed that he should sleep in the hotel parlor. But the lounge proved too hard. So he called the porter.

"I can't sleep on this lounge. Bring me a cot, will you, my boy?" he asked.

"A cot, sir? Did you say a cot, sir?"

"Yes, a cot. I can't sleep on this."

"Did you say a cot, sir?"

"Yes. You put a cot in here for me. I'm going out, but shall return presently."

When on his return he opened the door to what he thought was the parlor he was amazed to find a cradle near his suit case. He summoned the porter.

"Boy, I asked you to bring me a cot. That is not a cot. That is a baby's bed."

"No, sir; that is a cot, sir."

"Well, but I can't sleep in that. What I want is a cot—a long frame, you know, with springs on it." at the same time measuring with his hands.

"Oh, I see, sir," replied the boy.

"You don't want a cot, sir. What you want is a stretcher, sir."—Indianapolis News.

BEARDS AND BARE FACES.

Shaving Was at One Time Considered Almost a Crime.

We need not go so far back as the eighteenth century to find Englishmen who held that shaving was "agen God and nature." In the nineteenth, James Ward, R. A., in a "Defense of the Beard," set forth eighteen reasons for retaining it, mainly Scriptural, re-enforced by artistic considerations. "What would a Jupiter be without a beard?" As late as 1860 Theologos published a treatise entitled "Shaving—A Breach of the Sabbath and a Hindrance to the Spread of the Gospel." One of his points was that "Providence had

A FEMALE POPE.

Fanatical Polish Woman Finds New Religion.

A woman in Plock, Poland, Mary Kozłowska, is, in the estimation of her fanatical followers, a pope—the only woman pope in the world.

The secret of her rise to power lies in the fact that she sees visions and acts on them. She takes no decision before going into a trance, when, she says, voices from heaven tell her what to do.

She was past forty when the first vision came as she sat in her work-room making vestments for the canons at the old cathedral up on the hill. She told young priests that she had talked with God and the Blessed Virgin.

She began to hold prayer meetings, where more and more people came. She and they then vowed to destroy the antichrist they believed to be at the bottom of all the world's sin.

Scores rallied around her, taking strictest vows of self-sacrifice and poverty. They lead simple lives, eat no meat, drink no alcohol, go barefooted in the sharpest frost, wear hair shirts next their skins and devote their lives to the poor.

For them the will of emperors is the will of God, and the most repressive measures may only be resisted by prayer. They are most earnest missionaries, drawing to their churches people who had long ceased to worship anything but themselves.

When Rome called on them to give up various doctrines and discard the woman who saw visions they refused, were excommunicated and declared the woman their pope instead.

Their cult had spread to all the poor and industrial districts of the country. When they refused to leave the churches in which their priests preached there was war, with broken heads and lost lives.

When the Roman priests complained the Russian Government openly favored her. Her followers, who killed people in the fights for churches, have been acquitted by Russian courts, and Roman priests are imprisoned for writing against her. In less than two years after her excommunication she had built thirty churches, with schools, which are now dotted over the country.

Hunger and Play.

Herodotus learned from the Lydians that the Greek ball game originated in a prolonged famine in Lydia. For some time they endured it, but at last they invented dice, knuckle bones, the ball and all other games except drafts. One day they played these games so as to keep their minds off food; the next they took food and did not play. This alternation ended their provisions for 18 years, at the end of which time, the situation still being desperate, half the population emigrated. One can only suppose that the ball games were not very athletic; otherwise the increased appetite given by them must have undone much of the saving.

The lamp stands about ten inches high. The stem of the lamp is of dull brass, and the shade is of rose colored silk. Through the stem runs an electric wire to the bulb, which gives light under the shade.

One of his points was that "Providence had manifestly designed the beard as a protection for the throat and chest." But what about the woman's throat?

Nowhere was there more prejudice centuries ago against beards than at the inns of court. The "black books" of the inns tell us how offenders were fined for wearing beards, and sometimes were even compulsorily shaved by order of court. And the prejudice against the bearded barrister still lingers. Vice Chancellor Bacon carried his dislike to bearded or mustached barristers so far that he always refused to hear them. Even now there are very few leading counsel with beards, and I can remember only one unshaved barrister of the greatest eminence, the late Judah Philip Benjamin, Q. C.—silver tongued Benjamin, who wore a mustache and a goatee. — London Chronicle.

Earliest Newspaper.

The earliest English newspaper, Nathaniel Butter's "Weekeley Newes," some copies of which are to be seen at the Advertising Exhibition, had several predecessors abroad. The first of these in point of time was the "Ordinrij Avis," the publication of which began at Strassburg in 1609—fourteen years before the appearance of Nathaniel Butter's venture. In 1620 Abraham Verhoeven founded the "Nieuwe Thijdingen" at Antwerp, and this continued to appear weekly for 227 years. The oldest existing newspaper is apparently the Swedish official gazette, which dates back to 1644.

may be made to serve a double purpose if one only has a little ingenuity. Take, for instance, the summer hat, the soft, floppy straw hat that was in vogue this year. This hat can be made into a workbasket for Christmas.

First rip off all the trimmings, then turn the hat upside down. Take some silk or cretonne to harmonize with the straw and line the inside of the crown, making a tiny frill all around the edge. Put bias pieces of the material here and there along the sides of the basket in which to insert papers of needles and spools of thread. Make also a thimble case, which you sew securely to the frilled edge.

Rip off a section of straw from the brim of the hat and with this make a handle, or if the brim is not wide enough use ribbon, with a bow at the top. The summer hat has become a useful article.

A Talking Clock.

Have you seen the new talking clock? It is decidedly new in clockland and would make a very suitable present for this winter's bride. The case is made of dark walnut or mahogany and is about fourteen inches high. On first looking at it one would imagine that it was simply an ordinary clock, although a very good looking one. But if fortunate enough to hear the hours and half hours announced one might be startled to hear a deep man's voice call out, "Half past 3."

By means of a phonograph installed inside of the body of the frame this unnatural timepiece is given a voice very unlike the ordinary wooden clock, which in all appearance it resembles so closely.

Washing a Chamois Garment.

The secret is in not having the water too hot or letting it get cold. Make a soap jelly by slicing white soap in water and boiling it. Put enough of this into warm water to make a good suds and wash the article in it. If the garment is quite soiled repeat as often as necessary; then rinse in water of the same temperature made quite soapy with the jelly. Squeeze, but do not wring the garment, and hang to dry in a warm place. Keep squeezing the water out and patting between the hands to soften the skin while it is drying.

How to Keep Olives.

When a large bottle of olives is opened and only a part of them used the remainder, though left in the brine, become comparatively tasteless. To avoid this pour half an inch of olive oil and one tablespoonful of vinegar on the top and cork well. The olives will then retain their natural flavor indefinitely.

The Words That Won.

In London one of the weekly papers offered a prize for the best list of strong words to number ten. The announcement specified that but ten words would be considered from any one person and a committee of literary men would select from the numbers offered the ten strongest words in the English language.

These are the words that won: Hate, blood, hungry, dawn, coming, gone, love, dead, alone, forever.

Do you think of any stronger, fuller of suggestion.

STORING WINTER APPLES.

Essentials to Be Borne In Mind In Storing Apples and Other Fruit.

In storing fruit for winter, says Better Farming, the three essentials to be borne in mind are good ventilation, a proper temperature and moderately dry atmosphere. Unless they can all be met it is better to dispose of your fruit at prevailing market price rather than take the risk of loss by rotting.

The cellar in which the fruit is kept must be well drained, with double walls above ground. Double walls are better nonconductors than single walls. An outer entrance to the cellar is indispensable, as are also small double glass windows placed at least on two sides of the cellar, preferably on north and south sides. On warm days they can be used to good advantage in regulating the temperature. No storage cellar should contain a furnace, even when there is a partition wall between it and the fruit, as undue warmth cannot be prevented. The right temperature is a few degrees above the freezing point, about 36 degrees F. The temperature may vary considerably, however, without serious damage, but in very cold weather it is well to keep a thermometer close by and apply artificial heat if necessary. Barrels and crates or hanging bins are the best utensils for storing. Hanging bins are very convenient, as the fruit gets the full advantage of free circulation of air from beneath and through side slats, besides it can be easily sorted from them. Whatever utensil is used fruit should be raised up enough this insures against dampness and mold.

There is much advantage in knowing of the keeping qualities of the different varieties. The Rhode Island Greening is not so good a keeper in cold storage as the Baldwin, but it will keep in the cellar if placed in a dry location. Talmon Sweets keep well in cold storage and also in cellar if stored in barrels and are at their best during February and March, when they have a fine flavor. Rambo and Fallawater are also excellent keepers both in cellar and cold storage, but the Rambo is not a late keeper, being at its best in December, while Fallawater is most excellent late in winter and early spring.

Pears have much the same keeping qualities as apples and are stored the same; but, as a rule, they do not keep so well.

In storing fruit either in the cellar or cold storage there are two objects to be accomplished: one is to preserve it, the other to retain the flavor. Storing vegetables, especially cabbage, in the same cellar may be detrimental to the flavor of cabbage. Damp, ill smelling cellars will very likely render fruit less palatable too.

Farm profits will be increased more substantially by increasing acreage yields than by increasing acreages.—Farm and Fireside.

Orchard and Garden.

Tramp the snow well about apple and plum trees to prevent injury by mice.

One of the winter tasks that is too often neglected in the family orchard and vineyard and on ornamentals is judicious cutting back and thinning out of the new growth and of such of the old wood as can advantageously be removed.

There is probably no better covering for the strawberry bed during the winter than a layer of good, clean straw of some kind, though some growers prefer to use a mulch of strawy manure. Whatever material is used, it should be as free as possible from the seeds of grass and weeds, otherwise they will cause trouble when they come up among the plants in the spring.

The main reason for covering strawberry plants is to prevent the alternate freezing and thawing of the soil during cold nights and warm days. When plants are not protected they are likely to have their crowns and roots injured and may die. In addition to preventing this, the mulch will help retain moisture and may retard the blooming period for a week or ten days. The latter is advantageous, since the killing of the blooms by the late frosts in the spring may be avoided.

FREE OF ALL THREE DISEASES

"Fruit-a-tives" Brought Him Perfect Health

AVON, ONT., May 14th, 1913.

"I am younger since I have been taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. I was troubled very badly with Piles, Constipation and Stomach Disorder, but I found 'Fruit-a-tives' was the panacea for the whole three.

Now I am free of all these diseases and enjoying perfect health, and able to work whenever I like. Five years ago, I started taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. I took two every night and they worked wonders for me.

No other medicine I could get was so good and I took lots of different remedies before I found out how good 'Fruit-a-tives' were.

I keep 'Fruit-a-tives' on hand all the time, and am never without them. I even take them with me when I go motoring, so I can have them handy. 'Fruit-a-tives' are worthy of every good word I can say about them. The fact that they cured me of Piles, was something to be everlastingly thankful for."

THE FARMER'S MOTOR.

We may talk of the convenience and pleasure of owning an automobile—and they are important—but its greatest service to the farmer has been in destroying his isolation, says the National Stockman and Farmer.

The farmer no longer is limited to one market in the purchase of supplies. Every city or town inside a fifty mile radius is within easy reach.

Formerly his only associates were the neighbors of two or three miles in each direction. Now it is just as easy to spend Sunday with a "neighbor" in the next county.

No longer is his observation limited to one community. It has been widened to a hundred communities in a dozen counties. No one can fail to be impressed by the tremendous influence of this wider vision upon the farm family—upon their happiness, their work and their ambitions.

Rexall Cold Tablets are guaranteed to break up colds and grippe or your money back. Wallace's Drug Store, Ltd., agents for Napanee.

Funeral services were held at the funeral at Mount Pleasant church on Sunday afternoon. The funeral left the family residence at one o'clock, the services being held in Mount Pleasant church, and the edifice was far too small to accommodate the large number of sympathizers who came to pay their last respects to one whom they had learned to love and respect most dearly. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Down. The text chosen was one of the deceased's most favorite passages of the Bible, and in his remark the reverend gentleman spoke very feelingly of the great loss the family had sustained, as well as a great loss to the church, the deceased being one of the most ardent, faithful and useful workers. He could not understand why God in His wisdom has seen fit to remove the deceased so suddenly from their midst, but God's ways are not our ways, and while we could not understand he felt satisfied that everything was for the best, and she was now in Heaven with her Creator. Besides her husband, five children, two daughters at home and three sons in the west, are left to mourn the loss of a most devoted wife and mother. We join with a host of others in extending to the bereaved husband and family our deepest sympathy in this hour of affliction. The remains were placed in Riverside cemetery vault.

Rexall Chilblain Remedy is guaranteed to quickly relieve chilblains or your money refunded. Sold only at Wallace's, Ltd., Napanee's Leading Drug Store.

The Historical Meeting.

Last Friday evening, January 23rd, Col. Wm. N. Ponton, K. C., of Belleville, was the lecturer at the regular monthly meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, his subject being "Canada and her Sisters." The central idea of this lecture was to show the place occupied by each colony in the British Empire structure and to illustrate, by means of pictures, the varieties of industries, natural resources, arts and peoples that are combined to make the nation. Col. Ponton has a most excellent series of lantern views. He gave many scenes from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, South Africa, Gibraltar and England which required very little explanation to illustrate his point. Perhaps his most effective views were those which showed in some cases the great contrasts and in the others the similarity of the scenery, agricultural pursuits and buildings in the various British possessions. If any of his pictures are to be especially mentioned perhaps those of his home city, Belleville, should be given prominence. Throughout the entire lecture the speaker, by the frequent use of well chosen metaphors and quotations, emphasized his admiration for the greatest Empire the world has ever known. Col. Ponton brought to Napanee a very interesting collection of historical relics gathered from the various British possessions, which he displayed in the first part of his address. Space will not permit us to refer to them in detail but we would respectfully suggest that the Colonel should write the history of these and publish it in pamphlet form having a small cut of each with which to illustrate the work. Historical Hall was filled to its capacity and everyone approved of the hearty expression of thanks which the President conveyed to Col. Ponton. Dr. L. E. Horning, of Victoria University, Toronto, will be the lecturer on Friday evening, February 27th. His subject will be "Canada and the Empire." The meeting closed with "God Save the King."
